Psychologists Find 25% of Homeless Children Need Mental Health Services

“A pilot study in Wake County, North Carolina, finds that 25 percent of children who are homeless are in need of mental health services. The study, conducted by psychology researchers at NC State and Community Action Targeting Children who are Homeless (CATCH), highlights the need for more screening and support for the millions of homeless children in the United States.”

Final Child Care and Development Fund Regulations Published: Summary of Regulations Specific to Children and Families Experiencing Homelessness September 26, 2016

The new CCDF regulations eliminate some of the barriers homeless families face, and present important opportunities for state and local action to support families experiencing homelessness. They also further align child care policy with Head Start and public preschool policies for children experiencing homelessness.
